Important and emerging disease concerns of corn

Dr. Jackson-Ziems is responsible for statewide extension programming and research on established and emerging diseases of corn and sorghum. She is interested in applied research leading to improved disease diagnostics and management strategies to minimize loss of yield and quality. Her talk will focus on corn diseases in Nebraska which is the third largest corn-producing state in the United States.