Cover crops have the potential to improve soil health and provide grazing for Nebraska farmers looking to reduce erosion and soil nitrate loss. However, the predominant corn-soybean erosion limits the selection and productivity of cover crops. Koehler-Cole will present findings from four years of research in no-till corn and soybean systems in Nebraska with implications for both cover crop and main crop management.